Camping at the February camp was a bonus for me as I was on supposed to be on call but my colleague must have felt sorry for me and offered to do my call up till Saturday.

On the Friday I left early from work and went straight through to Kommetjie hoping to chill with some campers until Gianni arrived with our caravan. I was the first to arrive so just chilled on my own till the rest arrived.

The weather was perfect – no wind at all. At the last few camps we went on the wind could get quite hectic and we would try shelter ourselves as best as we could. We had quite a bit of green grass despite the drought and huge trees all around. It was a pretty camp site and the showers were lovely.

We had one big area to ourselves so we all camped close to one another and gathered in a central spot. Right outside Helen's tent.

Nadia and Frank graced us with their presence after being absent for many months. We missed you guys and hope to see you more often. They don't have a problem of too much work at camp now as their new VW transporter is no work at all.

Friday evening, we all sat round the camp fire chatting and braaiing our meat. It was a very small fire so Gianni cooked our chicken on our gas braai - which was delicious despite not being fire braaiied.

Greg camped without Jenny as she was in Johannesburg on a business trip. We missed you Jenny.

Greg was handing out some orange coloured looking shots which was not too bad tasting but I think it must have had a very high alcohol content as my legs went totally relaxed instantaneously.

Saturday morning was another stunning day – no wind at all.

Frank woke up early and drove off into town in his new VW transporter in search of coffee whilst Nadia was still fast asleep in the back. No more complaints about Nadia taking tooooooo long to get ready in the morning.

Ruth and Ginger visited us as camp as it was very close to their home. Ruth brought us delicious scones which she baked and home-made jams which we thoroughly enjoyed with our morning tea. Thank you very much x
Greg missed out on this as he had a business meeting/breakfast close by. I left shortly after that as I had to be at a memorial service in Franschhoek – what a drive.

The campsite is very close to the beach so almost everyone walked down to the beach. No one swam though as the water was too cold. Fires were lit in the evening and everyone gathered round braaiing and catching up with each other.

Oumie baked one of her delicious cakes again which I unfortunately missed out on. Thanks Oumie for all your lekker treats which we have tasted over the many years.

Everyone packed up on Sunday and left for home.

It was a very relaxing chilled camp.

Steak and Chips for lunch or KFC (Kommetjie Fried Chicken) ??

No fines.

See you at the next camp – Ganzekraal.
